

FY 2020 Taxable Valuations Per Pupil

Taxable valuations per pupil is a measure that identifies a school district’s effort to levy school taxes. In general:

- Districts with higher taxable valuations per pupil will have lower overall tax rates, will generate more property tax dollars on a per pupil basis, and will generate less state aid through the school aid formula on a per pupil basis than districts with lower taxable valuations per pupil.
- Districts with lower taxable valuations per pupil will generally have higher overall tax rates, will generate less property tax dollars on a per pupil basis, and will generate more state aid through the school aid formula than districts with higher taxable valuations per pupil.

The following chart provides the statewide maximum, minimum, and median taxable valuations per pupil from FY 2009 to FY 2021.

The following table provides information on median enrollments and median tax rate amounts broken out by taxable valuation per pupil categories for FY 2021. Data in the table indicate that, in general, as taxable valuations per pupil increase, median enrollments decrease and the median school district tax rate also declines.
